

INSTITUTE OF LEADERSHIP AND MANAGEMENT
LEVEL 5 AWARD IN LEADERSHIP

What does the content include?

Leadership and motivational theories and styles

Using your sphere of influence to communicate and achieve organisational values and goals

Emotional intelligence and leading others

What is entailed?

Participation in 3 learning days and individual tutorials, completing 1 assignment which is set in 3 parts, and applying learning in the workplace.

How much time does it take?

It usually runs over 4-5 months and requires participants to set aside a few hours every week to attend scheduled events and keep on top of course work. It is expected that a personal journal will be kept tracking progress and reflections as a leader through the programme.

Who runs it?

It is delivered by Christine Laverock, an experienced independent trainer, group facilitator, coach and mentor based in Woodbridge, Suffolk. Christine works alongside lots of local organisations, has been Chair of Suffolk Police Authority, a schools' inspector with OFSTED, worked in education for the London Borough of Haringey, and was a trainer for Barclays Bank plc. Christine also lectures for Edinburgh Napier University on Innovation, Creativity and Enterprise as part of a one year business degree that builds on this qualification.

Who's it for?

It is aimed at middle managers or those aspiring to a middle management position.

Where does it take place?

Learning days and tutorials usually take place at a central location in Ipswich, Suffolk.

What's it like?

The programme is challenging and varied to accommodate all learning styles. There are opportunities to raise issues in complete confidence relevant to participants' particular situation.

What's the outcome?

A nationally recognised qualification. Most participants report significant growth both personally and professionally. This can be built upon further with an optional one year more of study to convert into a Bachelor of Arts in Business and Enterprise.

What does it cost?

£770 (for programmes which commence in 2018) - this covers attendance at all learning days, 1:1 tutorials and individual support with assignments, a comprehensive training manual, lunch and refreshments, registration and certification and one year's studying membership with the ILM.

What has been said about the programme?

The programme is well thought through and well paced allowing sufficient time for learning, application and assignments. The quality of the trainer is key to the success of this course. Christine has been a very good tutor; she demonstrated effective leadership and has been supportive throughout the programme.
